It is an honest food. Read what S. E. Penney of Constantin, N. Y., says about it: "I can truly say that 'Page's Perfect Poultry Food' is the best Poultry Food that I ever fed to my hens."

Any one sending his address on a postal card to C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., and mentioning this paper, will receive by mail, free, postpaid, a sample package of "Page's Perfect Poultry Food."

AMUSEMENT NOTES

At the opera house tonight, Mr. Daniel Sully will appear in his comedy-drama, "The Golden Rule." Mr. Sully is enjoying a brilliant season with his new play, and the fact that everywhere it has been presented, the managers have insisted on a return engagement, is ample evidence that managerial judgment in this case coincides with public approval. As an example of clean, wholesome, modern American drama, "The Golden Rule" is deserving of the support of all classes of playgoers, and it is gratifying to note that Mr. Sully is meeting with the success he deserves in his efforts to present the right kind of a play to the right kind of people.

"Isle of Bong Bong."

America's foremost producing manager, R. C. Whitney has christened his sumptuous production of "The Isle of Bong Bong" which comes to the opera house next Thursday, December 5, a sparkling musical surprise. He has invested it with the most magnificent equipment of superb scenic, electrical and costume effects ever lavished on a theatrical offering. In addition, he has secured the services of an all star cast for its presentation headed by the favorite dialect comedian, Chas. A. Loder, who had headed his own company for several seasons in "O What a Night" and "The Funny Side of Life," and originated the part of the Dutchman in "Buster Brown." Miss Georgina Campbell plays the prima donna soubrette role of "Pascita" and comes to the part equipped thoroughly by experience not only in the musical comedy field but as a prominent principal of some of the largest dramatic productions including those of Wagenhals and Kemper.

According to entirely trustworthy reports, there is a rare treat in store for all who witness the performance of "Coming Thro' the Rye" at the opera house tomorrow night. This musical comedy is unquestionably one of the conspicuously great successes of the season. Its record as a drawing attraction is without parallel in the history of big musical shows, and the enormous receipts have been bestowed upon it as an entertainment leave no doubt as to its thoroughly high class and extremely enjoyable character. This is not merely the claim of a zealous advance agent. It is a statement amply verified by the career of this production all over the country. It will be presented here with an immense company of comedians, singers and dancers, and with all of the superb scenery and other embellishments which have distinguished it among the greatest of recent American productions. "Coming Thro' the Rye" is described as an uproariously funny conceit which compels immoderate laughter from the beginning to the end of the performance, except when relief is afforded by some fine musical number charmingly rendered. Historically it is said to be a constantly changing series of kaleidoscopic splendors, accomplished by the deft manipulation of electrical contrivances, with a vast display of vari-colored costumes as the background. Wherever "Coming Thro' the Rye" has been seen it has been unreservedly pronounced "the best show that has ever been seen here." The sale of seats for this musical attraction is now on at Kendrick's.

THE CELESTIAL COAL SACK.

Astronomical Mythology of The Australian Blackfellow.

Immediately below the lower stars of the group which forms the Southern Cross there is a black patch in the sky, dark, sack-shaped and mysterious. Scientifically accurate astronomers explain that it is not a patch, but, rather, something which becomes visible by reason of the anomaly that it contains nothing that is visible. The lay mind preferring bold reality to abstract truth, is somewhat startled to learn that an object is seen because there is nothing in it to see; but no one can dispute the fact; that coal sack is visible because it contains nothing that is visible. In other words, it is a vast hole in the stellar system, in which there is not even a pinch of stellar dust to shed a flicker of luminosity. It is typically and absolutely the quintessence of blackness. Because it is so, in contradiction to all preconceived notions, the human eye can see it without the aid of telescope or other instrument. Between the stars of the Milky Way there are many little holes in the stellar system—little by comparison, that is to say—but one must have telescopes and patience to find them. One need only cross the line to the Southern Hemisphere and locate the Southern Cross in order to see the coal sack.

With the wealth of legendary tale and fable woven around the northern stars by them through the ages that are gone, says Macmillan's Magazine, one is tempted to speculate what tales would not have been constructed around that fathomless mystery had it appeared north instead of south of the equator. When it rouses the poetical impulse within the brain of aboriginal Australians, what might it not have done with the ancient Greeks or still more ancient Egyptians? But they were denied it. The aboriginal uses it, as he uses most things, in a happy-go-lucky fashion. To him the world is a flat plain crowned with a dome shaped roof.

When a man dies he goes up to the roof and slowly journey over it till he can clamber down to the flat again and squeeze through, once more a man. The coal sack is the hole he goes through to get into the spirit world. Therefore, it is a very long climb. The journey over the roof is also very long, and it is hard to squeeze through when he reaches the flat again. So long does it take that by the time a man has completed the journey not only his hair, but his skin, has grown white with age. Wherever, the black fellow who has made the journey rejoins his tribe as a white fellow. Thus it was that when the white man first came to the land the aboriginals regarded him as a long-lost comrade.

BOTH BODIES RECOVERED.

A Double Drowning in Big Diamond Pond.

Colebrook, N. H., Dec. 2.—Late Saturday afternoon, after a search lasting nearly all day, a party of men recovered the bodies of Charles P. Heath of Wakefield, Mass., and Miss Lydia E. Hatch of Wilton, N. H., the victims of the double drowning in Big Diamond pond, 10 miles from here, on Friday. The bodies were recovered some distance from where it is believed they went down, and at a point where the pond is fully 50 feet deep. It was necessary to break up the ice on a large portion of the pond and drag the bottom with grappling hooks.
